Bolivian Photographer Goes Online at Albumen Gallery to Connect with International Audience

London January 31st 20017

The Bolivian photographer Javier Molina has chosen Albumen Gallery (www.albumen-gallery.com) for exhibiting his latest collection of landscape photography. The extensive online exhibition 'Ephemeral Passion' allows the photographer to simultaneously connect with a wider international audience and collectors of his work.

Javier Molina's photography covers a spectrum of styles and thematic approaches. But he regularly returns to Landscape photography fascinated by the transient nature in which landscape affects the viewer - both reflecting and setting moods. With their strong emphasis on mood, colour and texture it is not surprising to hear Javier Molina citing music as a strong influence on his photography.

Molina's highly individual approach to artistic landscape photography uniquely amalgamates a range of influences. Whereas some images conjure up the intensity in colour and mood of expressionist paintings other pieces are a creative modern photographic response to landscapes by 19th century romantic painter Caspar David Friedrich. Describing his approach to photography Javier Molina quotes Alfred Stieglitz saying "It is not what I see, but how I see it."

Molina's online exhibition at Albumen Gallery responds to a growing international interest in the photographer's work.

Javier Molina has published two photography books - 'Gran Poder' and 'Imágenes Paceñas, Lugares y Persona'. For 'Imágenes Paceñas, Lugares y Persona' Molina collaborated with the Bolivian poet Jaime Sáenz, who contributed the text.

The exhibition opened on January 23rd runs until March 10th.
