Albumen Gallery Announces Representation of Photographer Shamani Surendran

The Last Bird Song (2025)

Albumen Gallery, the London based fine art photography gallery is pleased to announce the representation of the photographer Shamani Surendran. This collaboration promises to bring a fresh and captivating perspective to the world of fine art photography.

In only a short time Shamani Surendran has made a name for herself and gained an international reputation for her innovative and thought-provoking photography, which has garnered critical acclaim and captivated international audiences.

The partnership between Albumen Gallery and Shamani Surendran represents an exciting step forward in the gallery's commitment to showcasing cutting-edge contemporary art. The gallery has a long history of supporting emerging and established artists, and this collaboration underscores their dedication to nurturing talent and presenting unique artistic voices to the world.

"We are excited to welcome Shamani Surendran to the Albumen Gallery family," says Stephan Schmid, Director of Albumen Gallery. "Shamani Surendran's work is both visually stunning and conceptually rich, and we believe that it will resonate deeply with our patrons. We look forward to introducing Shamani Surendran's art to our customer base and a wider audience.

Building on her impressive body of work Shamani Surendran's latest series of photographs, The Last Bird Song represents a meditation on environmental damage told through three recurring themes: the bird, the leafless tree, and the fallen leaf. Across this series of photographic based works, she returns to these symbols with quiet intensity, using them to ask what it means to witness nature's decline - and what we lose when memory replaces presence.

About Shamani Surendran

London based Shamani Surendran describes herself as a nature photographer. Trees represent a recurring theme in Shamani Surendran's work inspired by "a sense of connection" she feels when she is around trees. For Shamani Surendran nature photography captures more than just beauty - it preserves fleeting moments of harmony that remind us of what is at stake. Each image of a forest, a river, or a quiet mountain path is a call to protect the fragile balance that sustains life. By seeing the world through the lens of nature, we are urged not only to admire it, but also to safeguard it for future generations.

Shamani Surendran's work has been exhibited in several galleries in the US and UK and a number of her images and articles have been featured in limited edition photo books and photography magazines. Her work has also been short and long listed in a number of international competitions.

About Albumen Gallery

Albumen Gallery was set up in London in 2013. Specializing in 20th century and contemporary photography Albumen Gallery responds to shifting trends in how photographic art is experienced and purchased by collectors. In a world where online immediacy and global availability become accepted and expected Albumen Gallery eschews a permanent brick and mortar gallery space targeting through its online exhibition programme a wider international audience. The gallery's online presence is firmly coupled with a presence at leading international fine art photography fairs and a dedicated personalized customer and advisory service.

The breadth of our portfolio reflects diversity and tastes of the collector base we cater to. Albumen Gallery clients range from public and private museums, corporate collections and experienced collectors to those who are embarking upon their first photographic purchase. Discovering and nurturing new talent is an important aspect of our work. We introduce our collector base to emerging artist, who - in the footsteps of the great masters of photography and in a creative dialogue with the history of the medium - create exciting new contemporary art making use of the rich and wide-ranging possibilities the medium offers. Pioneering the online gallery without walls concept, Albumen Gallery is continuously developing the format and potential of online exhibitions as an accepted platform for exhibiting art photography. The Albumen Gallery Publishing series accompanies each exhibition with a dedicated photo book.
